Secret Years

As democratic freedoms open up aspects of life hidden during the Communist era, Hungary's recent history is being written anew. One previously unknown social group asserts itself in the feature-length film, Secret Years. Lesbians in 1970s Hungary had to be secretive about their identity and relationships. Their stories are told in this unique documentary a project of the Civil Works Association which entertains (and educates) film audiences while also providing a resource to contemporary historians and sociologists. What began as a series of interviews for a video archive (60 hours of material were collected) was woven into a film by the director Takács Mária. It is hoped that the stories of this no-longer-hidden group of women will soon be told also in print and online.
